Evaluating Financial Literacy 101

Student Course

To take the complete course, follow these instructions:

- 1) Visit <http://www.financialliteracy101.org>
- 2) In the Access Code box, enter "SFL1"

Feel free to have students evaluate the course too, but this trial access code should not be distributed in place of a school-specific access code.

The 2008-9 course will be live on July 14. The new version offers enhanced student feedback with personalized financial recommendations, an integrated financial planner that is completed as students progress through the course, a budgeting tool that is automatically saved for future reference, resources for independent students, and new content on financial "gotchas" that target students.

Administrative Tools

Financial Literacy 101's administrative interface enables course administrators to view student progress, contact students by email, view exam grades, get general usage statistics, manage "views" of active users, check course confirmation codes, find users based on various criteria, and export the data to a spreadsheet program such as Excel. Information is limited to usage and exam information only – any survey data is always provided in aggregate form to protect student privacy.

To view the administrative interface, follow these instructions:

- 1) Visit <http://www.financialliteracy101.org/admin>
- 2) In the School Code box, enter "NASFAA"
- 3) In the Password box, enter "1234"

The users you see are not real, so feel free to work with the information any way you see fit. If you visit the "View Users" page and see no users, they may have been archived by a previous tester. In that case, click on "View Archived Users" and either work with the data there or un-archive the users if you prefer.

The archive function is primarily to remove from active view students who have already completed the course.

Sample Reports

Depending on the type of implementation your school chooses, a comprehensive data report may be provided. To receive a sample report, please contact Jim Pfeiffer at jim@decisionpartners.org.
